Product Images

Short Description

Remote weather data, versatile integration. Cellular-based (2G), solar-powered unit sends remote weather station data to the Internet.

Description

Remote weather data, versatile integration. Cellular-based, solar-powered unit sends remote weather station data to the Internet.

Davis Vantage Connect sends comprehensive weather data to the web from remote locations, such as vacation or rental homes, ranches, orchards, farms, vineyards and fire hazard areas that lack power or a person to monitor the weather.

- A weather station receiver and cellular modem.
- Solar powered with battery backup; does not require any external power sources.
- Self-contained in a weather-resistant shelter.

- Uploads weather data through a cellular connection to WeatherLink.com in 5, 15, or 60-minute intervals, depending on the service plan you choose.
- Alerts you to alarm conditions in the field the moment they occur.
- Pairs with Davis' Vantage Pro2 or Vantage Vue integrated sensor suite.
